Love. Sex. Friendship. Pick any two.

Jessica Dalton had her life all planned out. She was going to meet the man of her dreams, fall in love, keep her friends, and never have to work again. Only someone forgot to tell the world that. Her best friend Faith has it all. Money, a gorgeous husband, and nothing to do all day but wonder where to shop next. Yet, she's miserable. The only thing that gives her day any meaning is sleeping with men to whom she's not married.

Flynn Hudson's last girlfriend killed herself after he broke up with her. The kind of conversation-ending information that makes first dates a minefield. Some women run. Some women want to fix him and make it all better. He wants the ones who leave and wants nothing to do with those who stay. His best friend Van has never had a relationship last more than four months. Until now. The problem is it's his boss's crazy, annoyingly sexy, terribly jealous daughter, and he can't get rid her.

Filled with wonderful characters and crackling dialogue, Love on Haight is the hilarious and sometimes poignant story of what happens when two sets of friends collide on the road to love and happiness.

It's touching. It's funny. It's human. It's messy.

It's love in the 21st Century.
