This book is meant to be enjoyed by mature readers age 18 or older.

Kendra Michaels could care less about Valentine's Day. In fact, she thinks it's a sham of a holiday designed to make single women feel guilty about not having a man on February 14th. She feels her life is complete, working at her dream job at a travel agency. She's independent, happy, and successful. Why on earth would she need a Valentine to spoil everything?

Mark Sullivan is Kendra's boss. He's been attracted to her for years, but never made a move because of her "no mixing business with pleasure" rule. With the agency in financial trouble, he has six weeks to come up with a Valentine's Day strategy to increase sales and keep the agency from closing permanently. He immediately knows what he wants to do and who he wants to work closely with. His plan includes a trip to the Maldiv Islands to show Kendra the true meaning of Valentine's Day. The only question is will she open her eyes? Or will she be too busy resisting cupid?
