Saving MacArthur: Book 2 - The Cavalry is Coming Fred Leander

I recently came across a posting on one of the most popular WW2 discussion forums. The poster asked: "Could the Philippines have been saved?" – meaning right after the invasion in December 1941. My interest awakened, I started looking into the response from the other members on that site and other forums. To my surprise I found that much of the discussion pivoted around the person of General Douglas MacArthur, the officer in command of the US army forces – USAFFE - in The Philippines at the time, rather than what was done, or not done, to save him and his command from defeat. The majority put the blame for the fall of the island nation on this general. This made me suspicious, I experienced much the same feeling I did when I first started my study on Operation Sea Lion, a suspicion growing stronger as I dug deeper into the story. It did not fit in with the general in question and the situation at the time. It was too shallow. I shall substantiate my reasoning on this as the story unfolds, the central point being that the big shots back in Washington could, or should, have acted differently.

The Philippines could not have been saved by a singular event or action, only by a combination. My book series is to show how this could have been possible. Prepare for a different US leadership!

Here is the second part of the series - The Cavalry is coming!
